SPEAKER: Like so many things these days, the transportation business is getting more and more complicated. For instance, almost half of all transportation companies believe the business environment is getting riskier, making it tough to find good employees.

What's more, one out of every five businesses worries about compliance with the law as well as extreme weather and natural disasters. And that's just for starters. Fortunately, Northland has the experience to make getting the right insurance coverage a lot less worrisome. That's why we contract with agents, not just ordinary insurance agents but agents who know truck inside out.

That kind of knowledge doesn't happen overnight. It takes time. At Northland, many of our agent relationships go back decades, some more than 60 years. With that kind of history behind us, it's not surprising that we have a deep understanding of the trucking industry, the regulatory environment, your local insurance market, and your business coverage needs.

By working together with our agent, we can help keep your business running smoothly and successfully. We know the ins and outs. That's the Northland advantage.
