

John J. Miller is the Deputy Commissioner of Intelligence & Counterterrorism of the NYPD. In that role, Commissioner Miller oversees the Intelligence Bureau, the Counterterrorism Bureau, and the NYPD's partnership in the FBI-NYPD Joint Terrorism Task Force (JTTF). Commissioner Miller has served in the post since 2014.

Commissioner Miller is the former Deputy Assistant Director of National Intelligence for Analysis. Prior to that, he was an Assistant Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), where he was in charge of public affairs, community outreach and served as the bureau's national spokesman.

Along with his law enforcement career, Miller has worked in journalism as a senior correspondent for CBS News reporting for CBS This Morning and CBS Evening News for 60 Minutes. He is the winner of the DuPont Silver Baton ("DuPont Award), two Peabody Awards and eleven Emmys. Miller is also a former ABC News correspondent and anchorman, perhaps best known for conducting a May 1998 interview with Osama bin Laden in Afghanistan. He is the co-author of the New York Times bestseller "The Cell: Inside the 9/11 plot". (Hyperion, 2002)

Miller is a member of the International Association of Bomb Technicians and Investigators and the International Association of Chiefs of Police. Miller was named the 2019 recipient of the FBI-NEIA Penrith Award for excellence in law enforcement leadership.

Miller has been an instructor at the FBI's National Executive Institute, as well as the Leadership in Counterterrorism (LinCT) course, and has received specialized training in management and organizational change from Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government, the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University and Columbia University.
